FOOL WITH A GUN SHOOT A GIRL

Sam Polihale Tried to Scare His Cousin With Loaded Revolver.

Sam Polihale is a lucky and a foolish man. He is one of the "didn't-know-it-was-loaded" type and it is through no fault of his that Lily Kinilau, his 18-year-old cousin, is still alive. She is lying in the Queen's hospital with a gaping wound in her head. The doctors say she will recover, but she will be terribly disfigured and will undergo much suffering before she will walk again.

The shooting occurred at 6 o'clock Saturday evening at the corner of Fort and School streets, in Lily Kinilau's own home. Sam Polihale, who is her cousin, is a police informer and carries a pistol "to scare people with." The pistol in question was a 38-caliber Colts revolver and belongs to the police department.

It was given to T. R. Allison when he was detailed as a guard for the transport Kintuck when she was in port recently. It seems that Allison wanted money and sold the pistol to Polihale. Polihale went to the Kinilau home Saturday evening and was telling his cousin of his importance in the police department. She asked him what he carried the pistol for and he said to scare people with. The sister and mother of the girl were present. She said she wasn't scared. At this Polihale raised the pistol and put it to her head. "Now," said he, "you are scared, aren't you?" Before the girl could reply the pistol exploded and she fell fainting to the floor, with her face terribly torn and bleeding. She was removed to the Queen's hospital immediately.

Both Polihale and Allison have been arrested. If the girl should die Polihale will have to stand trial for manslaughter, but the doctors say her recovery is assured. Allison is charged with embezzlement.

Policeman Badly Beaten.

Policeman Needham was severely beaten over the head and body early Saturday morning by a crowd of drunken sailors. A fight was started in front of the stevedores' office on the waterfront, and Needham attempted to quell the disturbance. His interference was the signal for a free-for-all fight and one of the party struck him several times with a half-filled beer bottle. Several bystanders witnessed the affair, but no one went to the assistance of the policeman. Needham reached the station in an exhausted condition and was later removed to the hospital.
